Positioned within the Med Two Collection in La Reserva del Higuierón, this penthouse forms part of a contemporary residential environment defined by clean architectural lines and an elevated setting. The development presents a cohesive identity with controlled access and a focus on privacy, while maintaining proximity to the surrounding urban and coastal infrastructure. Its south-facing orientation ensures consistent natural light throughout the day, reinforcing the sense of openness across both interior and exterior spaces.

The architectural language reflects modern Mediterranean design, where large openings and integrated outdoor areas create a fluid connection between inside and outside. The penthouse is designed to maximise light and orientation, with expansive glazing and direct access to terraces from the main living areas. The upper solarium extends the usable living space, offering a private rooftop setting that enhances the overall spatial experience of the residence.

Internally, the layout is organised around an open-plan living and dining area connected to a fully fitted kitchen, allowing for a continuous and functional living environment. The master bedroom includes an en suite bathroom, while the guest bedroom is positioned near a separate bathroom, ensuring privacy for both residents and visitors. A dedicated laundry area adds practicality without interrupting the main living zones, supporting everyday functionality within the home.

This space is designed for extended outdoor use, providing flexibility for both relaxation and social use throughout the day. The generous terrace dimensions further reinforce the indoor-outdoor lifestyle, offering multiple zones for seating, dining, and open-air living without compromising privacy.
